THIS IS HOW THE
HOUSE FLY FLIES

Depresses His Wings and Always Jumps Before Buzzing.

CAUGHT BY PHOTOGRAPHER

INSECTS ON WING AND SHOWS PLANTS GROWING.

Paris, Aug. 2.—The latest discovery is a method of taking photographs at the almost incredible speed of 2,000 pictures a second. The inventor is Louis Bull, a young American scientist who is settled in Paris. By this discovery it is possible to look at many natural processes which before this could only be guessed at.

For instance, it is possible now to watch plants growing, and see every movement of the most rapid insects. This science is called ultra-rapid cinematography. It is distinct from ultra-microscopic cinematography, another recent invention, by which it is possible to see the movements of microbes and other things invisible to the naked eye.

This Is How a Fly Flies

The new ultra-rapid cinematograph shows how a fly or bee or other flying insect uses its wings. What is to the ordinary person a mere confused buzzing, the plane becomes a clear and orderly process with this machine. One series of these pictures shows nineteen pictures of an ordinary house fly flying. The movements represented here occurred in the space of 1.105th of a second of time, and yet each one is seen more plainly than if an elephant were walking slowly before the observer.

Anyone can see from these pictures that the fly does not start flying by buzzing his wings, as most people suppose. He depresses his wings very much as a human aviator depresses the planes of his flying machine before starting. Then the fly gives himself a "take off" with his legs, and when he is fairly in the air his wings start buzzing.

Watching a Bullet Break a Bubble. Perhaps the most curious series of ultra-rapid cinematography pictures is that which shows the course of a rifle bullet through a soap bubble. The movements here depicted in 17 pictures occupied exactly 1.125th of a second. You see the bullet approaching the bubble. It pushes the tenuous skin of the bubble inward for some distance before it breaks it.

At last the bullet pushes through the skin, but the skin reforms behind the bullet and falls back into its original position before the bullet reaches the farther side of the bubble. When the bullet passes out of that side it leaves a hole and that destroys the bubble. You see it fade away to a drop of soapy water.

How the Photographs Are Taken

It is interesting to know the details of the methods by which these photographs are taken. To photograph an insect in flight it is necessary to arrange things so that he will fly voluntarily across the photographic field. With this object the device is placed near a window, so that the insects which are nearly always attracted toward the light, fly in that direction. It is indispensable to release the shutter at the precise moment when the creature traverses the photographic field. The system which succeeds well with ordinary flies, consists in keeping the insect captive by holding one foot in an electro-magnetic clamp connected with the circuit that controls the shutter. As soon as the insect starts to fly it puts the apparatus into operation.

Old Tom Turner Goes on Trading Tour to Win Bet of $100.

RETURNS WITH $125 PROFIT

TRAMPS OVER COUNTRY IN ANCIENT STYLE.

New York, Aug. 2.—With his face as red as the sun that was sinking behind the horizon, his shoes dusty and his collar wilted, but with a gleam in his wrinkled visage as broad comparatively as the before mentioned horizon, T. E. Turner, 70 years old, and a revivalist in horse trading, entered Greenwich, Conn., in triumph last night, leading a spirited chestnut-colored horse, on whose back he was riding gleefully. Happy, the old man's pet spang.

Turner is the owner of a large stock farm near Albany, and in days gone by was a horse trader on the road and a showman as well. Entering Greenwich he had just won a wager of $100 made to show that the art or science of horse trading was still a live one if the right man with the right shrewdness and activity got into it. The conditions of his bet were that he should start from Stamford, Conn., with a capital of $30, tramp about the country in the old-fashioned way and return to Stamford in two days with $100 profit to show in horse trading.

He tramped more than fifty miles in the course of his trading, part of it under a blistering sun yesterday, but he was in fine physical form, as well as in fine feather over his triumph when he got to Greenwich.

The discussion that started him on his kyspying arose at a Stamford hotel the other evening. He has been staying there for several months with his wife. A guest asserted that with the automobile and trolley interest in horseracing was almost dead, and that the old-fashioned horse trader would find pickings so dry he'd starve if he tried his vocation in these days. Old man Turner denied that, and the wager was laid.

Turner left Stamford at noon Tuesday with Happy at his heels and the $30 in a money belt about his body, under his clothing. In the fashion he had used to carry his money a generation ago. He walked eighteen miles to Mount Kisco, arriving there at 5 in the evening. He looked over horses, and in the morning bought one for $20. He moved on to Milwaukie with the horse, and there met Harry Gerney. He traded the horse with Gerney for another animal and $10 to boot.

Going back to Mount Kisco, he sold his new possession for $85 to a Mr. Williams. Then he moved on to Tarrytown and there bought a horse for $40. At Pleasantville he sold that steed to a Danbury man for another horse and $50.

Next morning he exchanged his latest equine acquisition for another spirited and classy but vicious nag that the head of the Brace farm school for boys desired greatly to lose. Turner valued this animal at $300, and wanted to keep him. But the provisions of his wager called for him to keep on trading. He laid his plans accordingly, and in the course of four more dickers he traded his "find" away and traded him back again.

And this was the horse, acting not at all vicious under the old man's hand, that Turner led into Greenwich last night. He had cleared $125, and had the good horse besides. He put the animal up at a local livery stable, tucked Happy under his arm and went to demand his $100 winnings and a retraction of the statement that horse trading wasn't as lively and profitable as ever if a man knew the game.

HEADED FOR JUNK PILE.

Naval Board Sitting in Judgment on Three Noted Cruisers.

Philadelphia, Aug. 2.—A naval board, headed by Rear Admiral Thomas, began today the task at the local navy yard of passing on the fate of three cruisers which but a few years ago were the undisputed leaders in their classes.

The vessels are the armored cruisers Columbia and Minneapolis, built as the commerce destroyers of the navy. The three cost more than $5,000,000 exclusive of their armament. The Columbia and Minneapolis, in the opinion of the officers at the yard, are most in danger of being consigned to the junk pile.

The Brooklyn, Admiral Schley's flagship in the Spanish-American war, and the vessel which played a very active part at the battle of Santiago, is in better shape, and is more likely to be ordered overhauled and modernized.

WEBER REPUBLICANS COME.

Political Outing at Saltair to Be Attended by Parlians.

Committees handling arrangements for Young Men's Republican day at Saltair, Friday, August 12, have received co-operation from many members of the party, and the day promises to be the greatest in the history of political outings in Utah. Yesterday members of the committee went to Ogden, where they received assurances from leading party members that a big delegation would come to Salt Lake from Weber county on August 12. The committee on speakers will soon be able to announce who will be the orators for the big day. The Bamberger line has given a rate of $1 for the round trip to Salt Lake from Ogden. Other roads have been asked to make low rates as it is believed that a great number of Republicans from all over the state desire to come to the capital on that day.

It's a Fact

That many people have no bank account who would have one if they understood a few things better.

It isn't necessary, as some people think, to have a large sum to deposit in order to form a business connection with a big bank, such as the National Copper.

Neither is there any mystery about the opening of an account. It is a perfectly simple business transaction, whether the depositor wishes to open a checking account or a savings account.

Many men and women risk the loss of money because of an erroneous belief that a bank, strong enough to satisfy their idea of security, is too important to trifle with their small savings.

The National Copper bank offers its services to those who desire a banking connection and who have to begin with a small deposit.
